

Acknowledgments

Experts and academics have helped the Commission become aware of the state of the art in a variety of areas, including issues that serious academic research has not yet settled, and in which a range of views exists. They have contributed with papers they wrote, presentations they made, and inputs they offered to the discussions both within and outside the workshops during the last two years. Their contributions have been critical to our work. Although any expression of acknowledgment will fail to fully capture the importance of their role, I would still like to thank each of them, and also to say how much I and my fellow Commissioners appreciated their contributions and enjoyed our interactions. I would also like to thank all those that helped the workshops become a reality, and all others who, in various capacities, helped this project come to a successful conclusion.
